CULTIVATED strawberries are ripe in the garden of the proprietor of this journal. They are of the Captain Jack variety, of good size and fine flavor, but irregular shape. This is a little earlier than usual. The plants wintered without any protection but that afforded by a big snow drift, but a number of plants were winter killed.

THE supplementary estimates mentioned in last Thursday's telegrams which did not contain any appropriation for a bridge at Edmonton, were supplementary to the current year's expenditure. That is it was a vote of money already expended. It is the supplementary estimates for the year commencing on July 1st next that are expected to include a sum for a bridge at Edmonton, and they are not down yet.

A PARTY of gentlemen consisting of Dr. Shaw and Messrs Sinclair and Tipping of Orillia, Carruthers, Dupuis, Skinner and Griesbach of Kingston, and Broome of London England, have arrived at Edmonton en route for the west, for the purpose of exploring the country with a view to its mineral and agricultural resources. PETER LUTED arrived from Lake Athabasca on Monday afternoon. He reports the Athabasca very high. Trade is good at Chipewyan. One of R. Secord's boats was sunk at the Grand Rapids and another got away, but the cargo of the sunken boat was recovered without much damage and the runaway boat was secured without any damage at all. Mr. Secord met J. Boulieau and some Chipewyans from Ft. Smith who were coming to Edmonton with their winter's trade of fur and bought them out, securing something like $4,000 worth. LAST week John T. Ryan, of St. Albert, who arrived from Kansas in the spring with the Kansas colony, lost a pocket book containing 14 $20 bills and a number of valuable papers some place between McCauley's livery stable and Fraser & Co.'s mill. On Monday a young half breed named Chas. Pepin was noticed having two $20 bills, and as this was an unusually large amount of money for him to have, suspicions were aroused that he had found the lost pocketbook. He was brought before Insp. Snyder and the two $20 bills satisfactorily accounted for as being the price of a pony sold to a man going to Battleford. He was at once released.

J. A. BURRELL, of Seattle, who went north a few weeks ago with R. Secord's party and in partnership with a Mr. Malturner, of Spokane, returned on Monday in company with Peter Luted. Messrs. Burrell and Malturner were travelling in separate canoes, each carrying a share of a year's outfit, the intention being to winter at some point on Great Slave lake and go out through British Columbia in the spring. When on the Athabasca Mr. Burrell's canoe upset and everything he had in it was lost. This discouraged him so that he decided to abandon the expedition and return home, which he did. He went south on Tuesday's train. Mr. Malturner will stay for the winter but will probably come out by way of Edmonton.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, JUNE 28TH, 1894.

QUEEN VS. WILLIAMS.

The adjourned preliminary examination in the case of Rance Williams charged with the murder George Steve, was concluded yesterday afternoon before J. A. McDougall, J. P.

Nixon Ford was sworn and said I live at Beaver hills. Was mining in June, 1893 at Hickory bar, about 14 miles below Fort Saskatchewan on the south side of the river. I went there in the last part of May. Found the dump box at the west end of the cut that had been dug out of the bank; the plate box was at the camp ground about 25 yards from the river and the wash tub 25 yards west of the camp ground. There were dishes under the tub, two tin plates, two tin cups, with handles, two forks and one knife, two tea spoons, one frying pan, one tin pan. Saw the guy sticks with short pieces of rope in them and thought they had been burned off. No sign of fire under where the tent had stood. Did not notice any sign of fire place or where there had been a fire except the one which I found there and used myself. The only thing that struck me as strange was my finding all the articles I have mentioned left around in such a careless way. I noticed nothing about the fire place except that occasionally when stirring up the fire I would sometimes pull out an eyelet such as produced. I stayed there about two weeks. I had a fire in the same place every day while there. Looked like any ordinary fire place. I next saw the same place this spring along with George Broderick, with his wife and my wife. This was before I examined the place with Constable Cowan. This was about the last of May. Did not use the same fire place this time. I shot a bear there in 1893, about ten yards from this fire place. I skinned it and left the carcase. Then came up to Taber's bar near Fort Saskatchewan. Met Martin Anderson and he and I went back to the same place to mine, and we dug a hole and buried the carcase right where it lay. I was all alone when I shot the bear. When there along with Broderick and our wives this spring I showed them where I had buried the bear and did not notice any change in the place since bringing it there. When there this spring with Constable Cowan and Mr. Peters I saw them dig out of the old fire place that I had used a quantity of stuff that I thought was burnt bones, tent eyelets, hooks and eyes such as produced. Don't remember seeing the oil stone before, but remember seeing the other articles produced brought out of the hole. I was there again with Constable Cowan a few days ago and I dug up the bones of the bear carcase I had before buried there. The place had no appearance of ever having been disturbed since I buried it. When there in 1893 I also found a pair of scales that would weigh about 3 or 4 ounces. The weights were 3, 4, 5 and 6 dwt. Each bowl was tied to the beam with twisted silk threads (white). The bowls were brass. I found them under the end of a rotten log near where I supposed the camp had been. I had been told of them by Martin Anderson before this. I also found a shovel, a new dipper and a bottle with about 1½ lbs., of quicksilver in it which was alongside the dipper. Also a 4 quart tin pail and a 3 quart tin pail which had been used over a fire, a white handled knife and two forks. All the things I have mentioned I left with Martin Anderson. I also found an axe. The axe produced I believe is the same but can't swear positively. I do not know where Martin Anderson is now. I built a bark camp in about June 1st 1893 at this place. The door of this bark camp is not more than 2½ or three feet from the fire place used. And the bark camp was about 5 yards from where the tent appeared to have been. It is about 10 yards from the fire place I used to where I buried the bear. The place I buried the bear is about 5 yards from where the tent appeared to have been. When I was down with Constable Cowan to this place this month he drew a small plan of the place and I believe it is correct. I saw him do it when at the place (plan marked exhibit C). Saw no sign of a camp fire where the bear was buried. Recognize the dump box as the same one I found there in the spring of 1893. I dug up a few days ago some of the bones of the bear's carcase that I buried in 1893, and gave them to Constable Cown. Believe those produced are the same.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prince. I was alone in June '93 when I found the things mentioned. When I buried the bear carcase the two tusks were in the jaw. When digging up the bones the other day I did not dig up the skull, but my little boy found it near where I was digging.

Mr. Beck said that all the evidence which the crown proposed to offer was now in. There was other evidence which he was not able to obtain in time for this examination without further adjournment and as he considered that sufficient evidence had been offered to secure a committal of the accused he did not think it necessary to make the delay. A further examination of the bone found would be made by experts before the trial if the accused was committed. He pointed out that it was the duty of the magistrate to commit for trial in the case of an offence the penalty of which was death, even if there was not sufficient evidence to convict the accused, if there was sufficient to give even a weak presumption of guilt, especially when other evidence was to be brought forward. He sketched the case. Steve was a respectable and industrious man. When leaving for down the river he bought supplies for several weeks, rented a tent and left some of his belongings in the hands of friends, evidently intending to return shortly. Williams came from Wetaskiwin destitute, found very little work. Worked for Saxsmith and left no better off. Worked for another man on Walter's bar and quit still no better off. Steve paid for the supplies purchased for the trip. The whole outfit belonged to him. He had both bills and gold. Steve and Williams were seen together at Hickory bar and within a few days Williams returns to town, having been away about two weeks. Passing Leon Moret's below Fort Saskatchewan, Moret remarked his agitated condition. He showed a quantity of gold to Moret who remarked on the large quantity he had made in a short time. He spoke of going to an hotel, but did not stay at an hotel. On reaching Edmonton the witness Ring noticed his good clothes and remarked to him that he had struck it rich. He bought a stove, a rifle and a watch and had $12 in cash when he got home. He sold $20 worth of gold and had some left. He had Steves' watch. Said he had bought it from a man in Edmonton. He said he had left Steve, who was going down the river. If Steve had been going down the river he would have taken his outfit. He did not take it. Next year when Williams was going to the same place with a large party he said he would find the outfit there. That Steve had been killed was proven by the burnt human bones and the articles found in the ashes known to have been Steve's. Although the evidence adduced was not sufficient to convict the prisoner, he held that it was sufficient to make it the duty of his worship to commit him for trial.

Mr. Prince said that if the crown had not sufficient evidence to convict it had no right to ask his worship to commit for trial. Before a man can be tried for murder it must be shown that a murder had been committed. This had not been shown. The circumstances that were alleged to point strongly towards the prisoner might occur in the most ordinary course of events in the life of miner's on the river. Williams only claimed to have $52.50. This was sufficient to account for all the purchases he made and was not more than a miner might well make in the time he was down the river. There was no evidence that Steve had been killed. There was no proof that Williams had more money than he admitted. There was no proof that Steve had the watch when he went down the river. He may have sold it in town before going down the river to the man from whom Williams bought it. Under the present circumstances that man was not likely to come forward and give evidence as to his ownership of the watch. It was impossible for a jury to convict on the present evidence and the magistrate had not greater power than a jury. When the crown had prepared its case would be time enough to commit. The crown could better go to the expense of re-arresting the prisoner than the prisoner's family could live without his support.

Mr. Beck replied that he had closed the case without all the evidence because he thought sufficient evidence had been adduced. Further evidence would be brought forward at the trial if the prisoner was committed. One important witness was now in Prince Albert. The prisoner had said that he had been making as much as $2.50 per day. Fifty-two dollars and fifty cents would be $2.50 per day for three weeks, and Williams was not three weeks away. Besides as Steve supplied the outfit Williams would have to pay his share out of his earnings.

Decision reserved until 10 a.m. to-day.

At 10 a.m. this morning Rance Williams was committed by the presiding magistrate, J. A. McDougall, to stand his trial for the murder of George Steve at the next sitting of the supreme court, which will probably be in October.

OUR HEARTFELT THANKS.

The settlers in township 55 range 22, north of the Sturgeon river, beg to seize on this available opportunity to thank the government at Regina for their readiness in answering our petition humbly asking them to have the hills leading to the bridge on the Sturgeon river near the Victoria trail made accessible.

It has been fully demonstrated in the document that the execution of the work demanded was one of the most actual necessity as we are, in the present condition of the hills, unable to make use of the bridge, but have to make a circuit of 4 or 5 miles to the old ford of the river in order to go to Fort Saskatchewan, our only business transacting post. We are thus, in the actual state of things, secluded from the rest of the world, and we cannot but feel an irrisistible impulse under the circumstances to express the government our sincere gratitude for their kind regard in inducing us, through the captious representations of their immigration agents, to come and settle in the Northwest and, when implanted there, to leave us thus incarcerated with our families in the wilderness without even a road to go and provide for the most absolute necessaries of a scanty existence.

Our petition, as required by decorum, was forwarded through the medium of our representative, A. Prince. Mr. Prince has since, at different times, been interviewed on the subject and his only answer so far is that he is urging the thing, but has not yet even received as much as a word of acknowledgement. It seems to me rather astonishing that men charged with the dispatch of public business and intrusted with as great and eviable a mandate as that which devolves upon them should thus remain in an imperturable attitude of mutism and stagnation when matters of vital importance are brought within their consideration. Would it be, for instance, too mortifying for the gentleman to turn away from the national manger for a moment and at least answer Mr. Prince, whose constituents help to defray the expenses of his sinecure?

I consider it a friendly advice and an indisputable token of our true interest in his political welfare to request the gentleman to cast open the gates of his memory and let it flash in like a streak of lightning, the humbling recollections of the disreputable rumpus of 1885 which was brought on to the country by the lethargy of the executive council of Ottawa. Magna est veritas et prevalbit.

ADVERTISING.

The following is what the Winnipeg Nor Wester has to say about its advertising, and as the Nor Wester is a first class paper which may be said to have achieved phenominal business success in an incredibly short space of time, and is conducted by a man who for 20 years conducted a successful paper, it may be taken for granted that the system of advertising set forth is best for the patrons of the paper or it would not be so good for the paper itself. It may be mentioned that these are the lines upon which the BULLETIN has always conducted its advertising business, with such variations as the different circumstances render necessary:

"A glance at all the city papers of the same day will show that the Nor'-Wester has, far and away, the largest advertising patronage of the lot—not to mention that it does not include a line devoted to foreign quack medicines or trash of any sort, generally published for a song, and that often badly sung.

The reason the Nor'-Wester is the favorite with shrewd advertisers is not a sentimental but a business one. It is because they believe the Nor'-Wester has the largest and best circulation; because they know by sight that its advertisements are better displayed, more attractive and readable; because they are certain from experience that they are more effective in bringing returns; in short, because they have demonstrated that it is incomparably the best and, therefore, cheapest advertising medium in Winnipeg.

Nor'-Wester advertising rates are inflexibly uniform for corresponding service.

There is not a contract made with any advertiser, the like of which will not be gladly made with any other—except, of course, in cases of preferred positions, which, needless to say, being already occupied cannot be also occupied by something else.

There is not a space occupied by an advertisement a corresponding space to which will not be given for a corresponding price.

There is not a free advertisement except the railroad time tables, which are published, not to benefit the railroads, but solely for the convenience of the public—even free passes not being either requested or accepted in return.

There is not a word of what purports to be "reading matter"—in the ordinary acceptation of that term—that is a "paid-for" advertisement in disguise. For no price offered will readers ever be imposed upon by such fraud. "The wayfaring man though a fool" cannot fail in distinguishing at sight between "reading" and advertising as printed in the Nor'-Wester.

GENERAL NEWS.

Calgary Herald: Mr. Angus Fraser, an old veteran of the H. B. C., who after serving at the old Rocky Mountain House in the palmy days of the fur trade, took charge of a small post at the mouth of the Ghost river, and then of the little H. B.C. "fort" at the mouth of the Elbow, has sold his place across the Bow opposite the Mounted police barracks and is contemplating a trip home to the old country, which he has not seen since he left almost a boy. Mr. Fraser is well known and liked by all old timers in Calgary.

Commercial: Without reference to any of the foregoing facts and figures, a calm view of the situation as it exists in the west, should convince any business man of the folly, the ruinous folly of the credit system, carried on by our country merchants during the past ten years. The country merchant has all along been the unsecured creditor of the farmer, and it is hard to see how he can devise a system which can secure him. While he has been giving credit without security, the mortgage company, the farm machinery agent, and the local money lender, as well as other shrewd operators, have been securing liens and mortgages on all the farmer possesses. Such concerns have all their machinery organized for the work in a state to which it would be impossible for the country merchant to attain. Under such circumstances he is simply running in a race in which he has no chance of coming out ahead, or even securing a place. He is in the race in one sense, but entirely out of it so far as a state of safety is concerned.

The Nor'-Wester, commenting on the Commercial's argument that the cause of the hard times in Manitoba is the credit system of the country merchants, says: "It is a wonder that so shrewd an observer did not go further when about it. That was not the place to stop. It is no trick to tell that the patient is suffering from typhoid; in the interest of the patient himself and his family it is necessary to discover whence the disease originates. "Hannah's" book debts may be worth only 15 cents on the dollar, but why are they not worth more? Because the farmers are poor and cannot pay, is the obvious reply. Very good; but why are the farmers too poor to pay their store debts? That is the way to go about an inquiry of this kind. Follow the matter right up until its very source is traced. Why can they not pay their debts? It is because all their spare cash and more too go in freight rates to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. We have recently shown that on sixteen specified articles of daily consumption, estimated on the quantities shipped into this city last year, the people annually pay $329,569 in excess of the rates charged from Montreal to St. Paul over the C.P.R.'s Sault road. This sum distributed among the farmers, out of whom the greater bulk of it ultimately comes, would sensibly increase the value of their book debts. Distribute also the excess charged on all other goods, and the value would be still further enhanced. The C. P. R. wheat rate from Minneapolis to New York or Boston is 32½ cents per 100 lbs.; the rate from Winnipeg to Montreal is 46 cents. Here is a difference of 13½ cents per 100 lbs., equal to 8.1 cents per bushel. Add this extra value, forcibly taken from the farmers of Manitoba in the absence of competition, to the price of the 500 bushels which are reckoned to be the average of the farmers of the province, and we have $40 per farm, or sufficient in itself to pay those store debts at the rate of 100 cents on the dollar."

Free Press: In the discussion upon the mounted police estimates it was made clear that some members of the House of Commons are under the impression that the force in question has survived its usefulness, or at least the time is at hand when the services of the corps can be dispensed with. It is the effective service performed by the mounted police that makes the opinion possible. If there were no mounted police corps, the nesessity for them would at once make itself apparent. If they were nothing else they are a law and order insurance policy. Similar bodies of men have been found necessary in every colony during its earlier days; the Australias and South Africa, we believe, continue them to the present time. These corps have there been found necessary for over half a century; the N.W.M.P. are little over twenty years old. And the elements of trouble are more in need of watching in the North-West than they ever were in Australia. In the United States and in these portions of it lying alongside our Territories, the American government think it necessary to have both infantry and cavalry permanently established; there is nothing in our institutions de facto preservative of law and order. The outbreak of 1885 has taught us that a false sense of security may be a very expensive thing. It is difficult to understand how men conversant with the condition of the North-West, its vast extent, conflicting ideas, peculiar population and vicinity to unsettled territories of a neighbor in more or less like condition, can have arrived at the conclusion that the mounted police are, or are immediately likely to be, a superfluous part of our executive forces. We have not heard that opinion expressed by men of the country speaking with a sense of responsibility. The time will come, no doubt, when the influx of population, the extension of municipalities and the other accompaniments of settlement and civilization will render the continuance of the mounted police unnecessary, but that time is not yet in sight.

FROM THE ROCKIES.

D.E. Noyes and H. Anthony arrived from Tete Jaune Cache and D. Noyes, jr., from White Mud lake on Monday, bringing thirteen pack horses loaded with fur, having made an excellent winter's trade. The rivers are higher than the oldest inhabitant has even seen them. While in the heart of the mountains near the Henry House on June 10th they encountered a snow storm. While in the mountains they killed four bears, two goats and sixteen sheep. They met a party of five men with twelve horses beyond the Jasper House who were on the way to Cassair. Mr. Anthony wintered at the Jasper House at the eastern outlet of the Jasper Pass as Tete Jaune Cache is at its western outlet. No snow lay in the pass all winter. It is a wide grassy valley right through the mountains with good grass and an excellent place for ranching, far different from the Kicking Horse pass, the present railway route. The bare ground during the winter extended for 30 miles this side of the Jasper House. The Indians of that region had a good winter. No sickness and plenty of game.

BIRTH.

KEIL—At Edmonton on Tuesday, June 26th, the wife of F. E. Kiel of a son.

ST. JEAN BAPTISTE SOCIETY.

The celebration of the French-Canadian national festival on Monday last was the first ever attempted in Edmonton on a large scale and was very successful. The number taking part in the large procession mentioned in last issue was not nearly the whole of the visitors of the day as many from distance arrived in time for the pic-nic who were not in time for the procession. High mass was celebrated at St. Joachim's church by Rev. Father Leduc and two assistant priests, and the sermon of the day was preached by Rev. Father Dorais, of Fort Saskatchewan. At the close of the service the procession formed up in the same order in which it had passed through town and proceeded to the Hudson's Bay Company's flat near the river bank where tables had been laid, decorated in rustic style, and where an ample dinner was served. After dinner addresses in French were delivered by Geo. Roy, president of the society; by Rev. L. Fouquet, chaplain of the society; by Mayor McCauley, in English; by A. Prince, M.L.A., in French and English, in the latter language speaking on behalf of the president to welcome the English speaking guests who were taking part. F. Marriaggi, J. H. Gariepy and Wilfrid Gariepy followed. A choir specially organized under the leadership of H. Morel, sang "O Canada, mon Pays mes Amours," and [illegible] patriotic songs, Mrs. Dr. Royal accompanying on the piano. Cheers were given for the visiting societies, Mayor McCauley and the brass band. Those who loved dancing adjourned to a platform that had been erected and to the music of an orchestra danced the afternoon away. Mr. Brault gave some excellent performances on the slack wire, and there were other amusements. A convention of delegates from Ft. Saskatchewan, St. Albert and Edmonton, to discuss the propriety of forming a society for the whole of Northern Alberta, of which Jos. Lamoureux was chairman and W. Gariepy secretary, it was decided to call another convention to meet at Edmonton on July 15th, and invitation to be sent to every French-Canadian settlement in the district. The proceedings at the pic-nic grounds lasted until 7 in the evening. A ball in Robertson's hall, at which there was an attendance of about 130, closed the celebration.

COMMUNICATIONS.

FORT SASKATCHEWAN,
June 27th 1894.

EDITOR BULLETIN:

In my recent letter commenting on the cricket match Edmonton versus Fort Saskatchewan, I omitted to mention that my letter was purely a personal one and not in any way voicing the opinions of any other members of the club.

GEO M. ROSS.

EDMONTON, June 25th 1894.

EDITOR BULLETIN:

SIR: Permit me to point out to Mr. G. M. Ross, from whom a letter appeared in your last issue relative to a cricket match played between Fort Saskatchewan and Edmonton, that there is no such place in the N. W.T., as "North" Edmonton. This town has been known as Fort Edmonton or Edmonton for the last 100 years, and I cannot see why the name should be changed now.

Yours truly
A. G. RANDALL.
